

WordConn | Literature

articles and Q/A on Literature

1001 Inventions and The Library of Secrets – starring Sir Ben Kingsley as Al-Jazari

March 20th, 2010 Posted in Videos Write comment

1001 Inventions and The Library of Secrets - st...

Three school children visit a dusty library to research the story of 'The Dark Ages'. What they find changes their world view dramatically as ingenious inventors and pioneers of science and culture are vividly brought to life. Starring Oscar-winning legend Sir Ben Kingsley in the role of The Librarian, this astounding movie provides an eye-opening introduction to the 1001 Inventions initiative and is the centrepiece for the global touring exhibition. Come and enjoy the movie in full widescreen and surround sound at the Science Museum in London (until the 30th June 2010). Entry is free for both children and adults.  The 1001 Inventions exhibition opened at London's Science Museum on January 21st 2010. Since that time it has become one of the most popular exhibition's that this prestigious venue has ever hosted. An average of 3000 visitors a day are visiting the exhibition, and the feedback from the audience has been overwhelmingly positive. This video gives a brief introduction to the exhibition's current residency. 1001 Inventions will be at the Science Museum in London from 21st January to 30th June 2010 (with a short closure from 25th Feb to 12th March). See it now before it goes on it's global voyage to major cities around the world!  1001Inventions is a global educational initiative that promotes awareness of the scientific and cultural achievements of Muslim civilisation, during the thousand year period from the 7th century onwards, and how ...