

Five things to do today

Posted in Own This City by Own This City on Jan 11, 2011 at 12:00am

Daniel Kitson

Theater

The Interminable Suicide of Gregory Church

English stand-up comedian Daniel Kitson—whose Stories for the Wobbly-Hearted was a memorable part of the 2006 Brits Off Broadway festival—shares the bittersweet tale of an ordinary man's elongated preparation for his own self-destruction in this acclaimed evening of storytelling, presented at St. Ann's Warehouse as part of the beneath the umbrella of the Under the Radar festival.

Music

Plan B

When last we met, Plan B—a.k.a. Londoner Ben Drew—was spitting crass, artful rhymes, sometimes over acoustic guitar. Now, the musician has changed his tune: His forthcoming album, The Defamation of Strickland Banks, finds him mainly in a neosoul mold. Check out his new sound at Bowery Ballroom.

Shopping

WolfHome

Once a year, this decorating haven drops prices on pillows, drapery and fabrics up to 70 percent.

Museums

"1001 Inventions"

The New York Hall of Science exhibition shines a spotlight on the Muslim world's achievements in science, some dating as far back as 1,000 years, and illustrates how ancient developments—from the toothbrush to algebra—have impacted modern knowledge and technology.

Exhibit

"Is This the Al Jaffee Art Exhibit?"

Get a close look at the life and work of cartoonist Al Jaffee at the Museum of Comic and Cartoon Art, from his childhood in a Lithuanian shtetl and to his long career at Mad magazine.