

GETTY

01/21/2010 10:23 AM

1 of 33 < >

A visitor looks at one of the models displayed at the science museum during the exhibition "1001 Inventions: Discover the Muslim Heritage in Our World" in central London on January 21, 2010. The debt owed by European scholars to their Muslim counterparts on everything from water pumps and blood circulation to engineering and map-making was unveiled in a London exhibition on January 21. Pr Salim Al-Hassani, one of the main organisers of "1001 Inventions: Discover the Muslim Heritage in Our World" among others hope to illuminate 1,000 years of neglected science from north Africa to China that provided a bridge between ancient and Renaissance scholarship. AFP PHOTO/Shawn Curry (Photo credit should read SHAUN CURRY/AFP/Getty Images)