

puddle of red

1001 Inventions and the Library of Secrets

My friend was showing me this video on Vimeo made by British director of photography Robin Fox. The idea behind this video is that the Dark Ages was the name given to the time in world which had diseases, lack of innovation, and no social progress at all. Because the westerners were more involved in writing world history, that is why this era was given a name that portrays all the "darkness" that happened. In fact, the Dark Ages in Europe was the Islamic Golden Age of 1001 inventions. After watching this video, you'll understand how. This short film stars award winning Ben Kingsley, the actor that played the psychologist in Martin Scorsese's Shutter Island.